Beloved Friend Garrison.

Your most acceptable favors are all in hand, and give my entire household the greatest pleasure and satisfaction.

Tod Bobé pulse beats higher than ever, and he says he is in love with you all, particularly Frankey, and hopes, he says, to be able to add something to his happiness before long.

We are well pleased at increasing the Garrisons in our house, by the additions of the photographs of those not heretofore in our possession, and think ourselves greatly enriched thereby.

If it comports with your entire convenience, we should be greatly pleased to have you at our house when next you come here. It is always perfectly convenient to have you, and you must have felt how your presence adds to our happiness. Nevertheless, we shall entirely understand it if you should not be able to gratify us. If you make up your mind beforehand, as to your coming to our house, and will inform me, I will meet you anywhere you may state.

With regard to the money you speak of, if you insist upon not appropriating it, purely as you might please (which I should prefer) it can be given to the ladies, or to Geo. Thompson whichever you think best under all the circumstances. If to the ladies, I should like it to come from my son William Gibbons Hopper, in order that he may become familiar with, and used to the luxury of giving.

With best love to every one of your dear family. Ever your devoted and attached friend.

John Hopper
